

Meaningful Mindfulness

If you've heard of or read about mindfulness meditation – also known as mindfulness – you might be curious about how to practise it.

Simply said it means 'living in the moment' or 'being present'. Hmm, easier said than done I think. Here are some tips for understanding mindfulness and its benefits to get you started.

WHAT IS MINDFULNESS?

Mindfulness is a type of meditation in which you focus on being intensely aware of what you're sensing and feeling in the moment, without interpretation or judgment. Practising mindfulness involves breathing methods, guided imagery and other practices to relax the body and mind and help reduce stress.

Spending too much time planning, problem-solving, daydreaming or thinking negative or random thoughts can be draining. It can also make you more likely to experience stress, anxiety and symptoms of depression. Practising mindfulness exercises can help you direct your attention away from this kind of thinking and engage with the world around you.

WHAT ARE THE BENEFITS OF MEDITATION?

Meditation has been studied in many clinical trials. The overall evidence supports the effectiveness of meditation for various conditions, including:

- stress
- anxiety
- pain
- depression
- insomnia
- high blood pressure (hypertension).

Some preliminary research indicates that meditation can also help people with asthma and fibromyalgia. Meditation can help you experience thoughts and emotions with greater balance and acceptance.

Meditation also has been shown to:

- improve attention
- decrease job burnout
- improve sleep
- improve diabetes control.

WHAT ARE SOME EXAMPLES OF MINDFULNESS EXERCISES?

There are many simple ways to practise mindfulness. Some examples include:

● Pay attention

It's hard to slow down and notice things in a busy world. Try to take the time to experience your environment with all of your senses – touch, sound, sight, smell and taste. For example, when you eat a favourite food, take the time to smell, taste and truly enjoy it.

● Live in the moment

Try to intentionally bring an open, accepting and discerning attention to everything you do. Find joy in simple pleasures. This also requires discipline to avoid distractions, switch off your phone or social media when with others or out on a walk, avoid multitasking when trying to focus on a specific job or experience so as to fully appreciate it.

● Accept yourself

Treat yourself the way you would treat a good friend.

● Focus on your breathing

When you have negative thoughts, try to sit down, take a deep breath and close your eyes. Focus on your breath as it moves in and out of your body. Sitting and breathing for even just a minute can help.

You can also try more structured mindfulness exercises, such as:

● Body scan meditation

Lie on your back with your legs extended and arms at your sides, palms facing up. Focus your attention slowly and deliberately on each part of your body, in order, from toe to head or head to toe.

Be aware of any sensations, emotions or thoughts associated with each part of your body.

● Sitting meditation

Sit comfortably with your back straight, feet flat on the floor and hands in your lap. Breathing through your nose, focus on your breath moving in and out of your body. If physical sensations or thoughts interrupt your meditation, note the experience and then return your focus to your breath.

● Walking meditation

Find a quiet place 10 to 20 feet (3–6m) in length, and begin to walk slowly. Focus on the experience of walking, being aware of the sensations of standing and the subtle movements that keep your balance. When you reach the end of your path, turn and continue walking, maintaining awareness of your sensations.

WHEN AND HOW OFTEN SHOULD I PRACTISE MINDFULNESS EXERCISES?

It depends on what kind of mindfulness exercise you plan to do.

Simple mindfulness exercises can be practised anywhere and anytime. Research indicates that engaging your senses outdoors is especially beneficial.

For more structured mindfulness exercises, such as body scan meditation or sitting meditation, you'll need to set aside time when you can be in a quiet place without distractions or interruptions. You might choose to practise this type of exercise early in the morning before you begin your daily routine.

Aim to practise mindfulness every day for about 6 months. Over time, you might find that mindfulness becomes effortless. Think of it as a commitment to reconnecting with and nurturing yourself.
